

Saturday, December 11th, 2010 (After Shabbat)

To DCYF & All Other Agencies & Persons Concerned,

We, Wenceslao Gonzalez & Cibeles Jolivette Gonzalez, parents of Wenceslao Adonis Gonzalez III and Galileo Basilius Gonzalez, are writing this letter to express our displeasure at what has occurred with our youngest son Galileo Basilius Gonzalez.

If your account has been fully accurate in nature, then we can only in the spirit of fairness, commend you for having admitted to this occurrence and for having notified us of it, even while expressing our concern and discontent at what has occurred, and the possible implications that it may have for our son's long term health, as well as the lack of organized operation which so evidently exists within the system by which certain medical services are provided to our sons.

Though we give credit to your willing admittance of this error, please be advised that this does not in any way appease our displeasure at past errors which have not been so willingly admitted, nor does it soften our resolve to obtain justice through ethical means for those violations of our rights which have resulted in disastrous consequences for our sons.

We have been explained by our visit supervisor at CASEY FAMILY SERVICES how he waited for four hours with Galileo for him to receive his annual physical. Galileo's regular doctor was unable to attend him and another doctor, who does not normally see him, saw him that day, and gave him several vaccine injections without obviously caring to consult Galileo's medical records, where it is indicated that we, his parents, have asked a year and a half ago that no immunizations be given to any of them, for religious as well as scientific reasons.

The visit supervisor Mr. Ehrhardt, was not aware of this request that we had made, and DCYF apparently did not bother to inform him, though the DCYF social worker Heather Fogg afterwards told him, that the vaccines should not have been given to Galileo.

Wencito was not affected by this, as his physical had occurred on another day, and he was not given any vaccinations. Only poor Galileo was subjected to this health risk.

We have been told that we will be provided with all the information pertaining to this unpleasant occurrence, and that we will be informed of exactly which injections were given to Galileo.

However, several valid questions and concerns come to mind, which will be expressed in this letter.

Questions:

1) If the doctor who normally sees Galileo gave him an appointment for that specific day, we must logically assume that it was because that time slot was vacant in his schedule, and he was at liberty to fulfill his professional obligation towards our son at that specific time. If something had arisen which would have somehow impeded his ability to fulfill that obligation, could he not have notified DCYF or CASEY to schedule another date for the physical?

2) Even if some unforeseen event arose suddenly, which at the last moment impeded the doctor from fulfilling his obligation, does it take four hours to find a replacement? What was going on in all that time? And in all that time, could not the replacement have been informed of the fact that our son was not to receive any injections? We recall our past visits to the pediatrician, and cannot remember waiting four hours, though at times we did have to wait for perhaps half an hour. Why would any child who has an appointment be made to wait for such a long period of time? We can understand perhaps a walk-in patient, who has to unexpectedly be accommodated into a usually full schedule, but not someone who has an appointment!

3) What kind of doctor knowing that he is covering someone else's patient, would so recklessly expose himself to the potential for error when dealing with an unknown patient by refusing to consult that child's chart? When he was chosen to act as a substitute for the regular doctor, was he not at the same time provided with the necessary info to competently fulfill that task? Why was he not handed Galileo's chart?

And even if he was not handed Galileo's chart, what effort would it have taken on his behalf to obtain the necessary information? Galileo was seen at the Hasbro Children's Hospital Clinic Rainbow Pediatrics.

This clinic within the Hasbro Hospital is really part of Rhode

Hasbro Children's Hospital

The Pediatric Division of Rhode Island Hospital

All for one.

Search

Island Hospital, and is part of the Lifespan Network as is confirmed in the following link:

<http://www.lifespan.org/hch/>

Therefore, they must have the most up to date technology when it comes to storing patient information on their computer systems. Most doctors have computers in their offices (be it a laptop or desktop), so retrieval of the necessary information in order to avoid potential errors should pose no difficulty when access to such advance technology is mainstream, especially in hospitals which are financially well endowed.

4) We can understand that since this was Galileo's physical for 2010, and CASEY has been involved in this case since January of this year, that they were not present at last year's physical in order to have known that Galileo was not supposed to receive any vaccines.

However, since Wencito had already had his 2010 physical, as one of us (the father of the boys) was informed on the December 8th trial, and received no vaccinations, should not this have likewise given an understanding that Galileo was subject to the same treatment, despite their different ages? After all, it would not make sense for us to allow one son to have vaccinations while prohibiting them for the other.

Concerns:

1) Situations like these are highly effective at revealing the powerlessness of our position as parents, due to the onslaught of civil rights violations that we have suffered. Even if we were informed, we could not do anything to prevent it, because we have been kept far away from what happens to our boys. We are always informed after things occur. The few things that we have been notified of beforehand, has been in an attempt to obtain our consent after a course of action had already been planned without us, and if we deny our consent the course of action proceeds anyway.

2) While perusing the Hasbro Children's Hospital page we noticed that the first thing which popped up on their site slideshow, showcasing their services, is the announcement of Psychiatric "Services" available at the same place. That they have this division in the same place where our sons get treated worries us, because of the obvious intentions of our main accuser Ana, and the false labels which have been placed on our sons, which have been insinuated to be mostly "psychological" in nature (as in a disorder). DCYF and other agencies can roll their eyes all they want at this comment, but yet after a year and a half of a mock "trials", we have not been allowed to present any evidence which would prove what is being said about her. The reluctance on the part of any of these agencies to launch an impartial investigation on our main accuser (when there is sufficient evidence and cause to warrant one) shows that they are afraid of being proven wrong.

If they are so sure that these perceptions being stated are wrong, then they should prove it by doing a thorough and impartial investigation on her, rather than pre-announced visits that are always partial towards her in their assessment . We have evidence to prove that her motives (as have been stated) are real, and that they more than justify our concerns, it is not our fault that we have been impeded from presenting it.

3) Hasbro Children's Hospital is a division of Rhode Island Hospital. Prior to Ana becoming a nurse in 2005, she worked in Rhode Island Hospital where she was responsible for dealing with medical equipment and translating for the doctors to Spanish speaking patients. She had worked there for several years and made acquaintances with several doctors who know her. Last time we were aware, she was working at Women's and Infants Hospital (link: <http://www.womenandinfants.org/>), but we still do not know if she might occasionally work in Rhode Island hospital, or maintain some contact with any of the personnel who used to be her colleagues. Since the pediatrician's input is also considered, and used as a tool when labeling our sons, there always exists the probability that Ana may use her position not only as foster parent of our sons, but as someone who is intimately acquainted with the functioning of, and staff of this hospital, to exert her influence on the pediatrician's perceptions.

The logo for Hasbro Children's Hospital features a blue background with the text "Hasbro Children's Hospital" in white, bold, sans-serif font. Below it, "The Pediatric Division of Rhode Island Hospital" is written in a smaller, lighter font. At the bottom left, the tagline "All for one." is visible. On the right side, there is a search bar with the word "Search" and a small blue button.

This continues to be the case even if our sons are accompanied to their appointments by another person. We find it highly unlikely that Ana has NEVER seen or spoken with our sons' pediatrician, and if anyone were to make such a statement we would know that they are not being honest, because even the pediatrician who saw our boys at the Panda Clinic on May 15th 2009, said when she testified on the May 12th 2010 trial session, that she had based her assessment on reports (bogus ones) from Spain, information (no doubt of a dubious quality) provided by DCYF, and the input of the caretaker (in other words Ana). In case anyone, after all that has occurred throughout the period of time of this highly bizarre case, would dare to state that such a concern is "farfetched", one has only to recall what the Panda pediatrician had said on the May 12th trial, that she had been told that we had made our children do bizarre rituals!

Does not all this stem from Ana's fabricated fantasies? We have enough documented evidence to show how strong an influence she exerts behind the scenes, and how there have been careful efforts to conceal such influence and make us appear as paranoid for stating the truth, merely because the truth just happens to be bizarre.

If Ana can influence the PANDA Clinic pediatrician, she can also influence our sons' pediatrician(s) (we do not know if both of them have the same pediatrician). Because of this, the pediatrician may attribute any conditioned behavior which exhibits itself, or a failure to reach certain developmental milestones to non-existent causes such as "learning disabilities" or other so-called "disorders".

While the involved agencies continue to deny that Ana, and the situations which she has created, are responsible for our sons' behavior and halted intellectual development, and continue to conveniently deceive themselves by stating that she is doing a "fine job", other "reasons" must be sought elsewhere, away from the actual cause, to explain the continued regression of our sons, and those "reasons" will undoubtedly not be for the genuine benefit of our sons.

4) The carelessness which this doctor showed in treating our youngest son Galileo, makes us concerned about whether carelessness could also have existed in other areas. After all, a doctor who does not even bother to check the record of a new patient, can be equally tempted to be careless in other vital areas such as hygiene when doing certain procedures. Did this doctor wear gloves? Was the injection kept in a purely sterile environment before being introduced?

Was the area properly cleaned after removing the injection? These are all things, that given the carelessness which has been so rampant in the care of our sons, worries us.

Our worries are only further heightened by the fact that we have been kept in the dark as to what goes on with them, and what decisions are made for them. Impotence with regard to defending one's children, and deciding their fate, is the worst antidote for worries and stress, and is one of the hardest blows to anyone's dignity as a human being.

5) Even though we were told that Galileo had no adverse reactions to the vaccinations, we still are concerned about the potential long-term effects on his health. As the below links to articles written by doctors show:

Article Written By A Doctor : Why You Should Avoid Vaccines

<http://www.newswithviews.com/Howenstine/james.htm>

Vaccination: A Sacrament of Modern Medicine

<http://www.healthy.net/scr/article.aspx?ID=1121>

Are We Kidding Ourselves? Article By Doctor- <http://www.whale.to/vaccines/smith.html>

A Proposition To Be Taken Seriously:

We ask this of your agencies, if we were to find a licensed holistic pediatrician and pay part of the cost for the care, would your agencies be so cooperative as take our children to their private practice? Unfortunately, we cannot pay the full cost because of all the financial problems that have arisen as a result of Ana's actions and false accusations. However, if such a pediatrician would be chosen, all of our boys' medical info could be sent to them, and they would be able to provide a healthier approach to the child's well being, which incorporates also nutrition and positive stimulation.

While there will always be the possibility that Ana could also influence a holistic pediatrician to some extent, a holistic doctor would try gentler approaches than would a conventional doctor, which could have some positive impact (despite their unnurturing environment), such as nutritional planning, supplements, and ways of enhancing the immune system to promote the prevention of disease.

It seems that we can only expect grief from the actions of your agencies, but we nevertheless still await some minor cooperation on your part. Though we know, that if an agency can violate civil rights, they are obviously determined not to do anything that will please us.

Sincerely,

